The tonnage hatch-coaming had been already closed ~~in~~ with bolted plates and fitted with two booby hatches - one to the extra gunners accommodation and the other to the magazine - in this case the gunners accommodation occupies the full width of the vessel. The plating covering the tonnage hatchway has now been riveted and adequate stiffeners placed below as the plating used is only $\frac{1}{4}$ " - The two openings in the after bulkhead of the tonnage space have been plated up while both openings in the forward bulkhead remain - one as an entrance to the D.G. switches and the other for access to the gunners quarters.
