Dear Sir,

Motorship "ANNAMINA"

With reference to your letter of the 7th instant, the only information, so far available, regarding above vessel is that the leakage was first noticed in the engine room when water was thrown up by the flywheel.

It is stated that the source of the leakage could not be ascertained and that the engines were eventually stopped and considerable time elapsed before the vessel sank, stern first.

The Owner states he will supply more details when the log books are available.

Yours faithfully,

The Secretary,
London.
