The Secretary,
London.

Dear Sir,

Motorship "ADAMS BECK".

With reference to your letter of the 1st November, a further cursory examination has been carried out on the holds of the above ship in view of the request that this vessel make one further trip to Greece with cargo, and we would recommend that the double bottom tanks be tested before sailing, and that in all holds various rivets through the hopper side tank top plating which were found to be leaking should be welded, and fractures in the hopper side tank top plating should be temporarily repaired and some frames in all holds where fractured should be temporarily strapped.

All the above work could be done afloat.

We are, Dear Sir,
Yours faithfully,
THE SURVEYORS.

All the above work could be done at once.

It is suggested that the work should be temporarily suspended until the work on the register is completed and some further work is done on the register. It is suggested that the work on the register should be done first and then the work on the register should be done. It is suggested that the work on the register should be done first and then the work on the register should be done. It is suggested that the work on the register should be done first and then the work on the register
