REPAIRS

When this ship was partly laden, a leak on the larboard side was discovered, she was consequently lightened and listed to Starboard, when upon stripping the metal sheathing it was found that the leak proceeded from a treenail hole bored from the inside, thro' within about an eighth of an inch, into which sheathing nails had passed causing the leak. A treenail has been driven into the nail hole, and upon my sounding her when fully laden she proved to be quite tight -
