, 1945.

We left here at 9.00 a.m. immediately at sea the wind changed to a gale and a very big sea arose. The ship in a very bad weather of it and we had to slow down our engines to ease the ship. At 2.00 p.m. our starboard engine broke down due to the lubricating oil pump striking the cylinder. Repairs could not be made at sea, so we continued here with only one engine working, but the ship was behind us. We arrived at 7.30 the same evening.

Next day Lloyd's Surveyor called and he has recommended repairs to the starboard engine, the oil pump, and the water pump of the starboard main engine. They are almost finished now, and I hope to sail on Tuesday.

The whole ship seems to be in a very bad state, and the Surveyor here recommends that she should have a very thorough inspection at the first opportunity.
