TANKER
BOAT'S RETURN TO SHIP AFTER EXPLOSION
 FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT
 FOLKESTONE, JAN. 9
 The oil tanker British Liberty has been lost off the north-east French coast following violent explosions as she was nearing the port for which she was bound with a cargo of crude oil.
 Eighteen members of her crew reached port yesterday, but it is feared that the captain and 19 others have lost their lives.
 After the first explosion on Saturday the captain decided, as there was grave risk of fire, to abandon ship. Two boats were launched, the captain and 19 others getting safely afloat in one. The other, which was to take 18 men, overturned as it was being launched and several men were thrown into the oil-covered sea. The boat was righted and the men were picked up after great difficulty.
 As no fire was seen in the British Liberty the captain's boat returned. They had not been long in the ship when two heavy explosions were heard and fire broke out, and later the vessel sank. Those in the other boat pulled to a lightship.
