Stockholm, Jan. 10.—Aircraft and lifeboats searched in the Gulf of Bothnia to-day for the Swedish steamer Nedjan which last night radioed for help after damage to her rudder. The ship, with 16 men on board, was believed to be drifting helplessly towards the rocks off Eggegrund. A search plane reported by radio having sighted an upturned lifeboat with a white hull and a number of planks floating in the sea. They were seen south-east of Eggegrund Lighthouse, in the Bay of Gefle. All lifeboats were at once directed towards the area. Distress signals came from the vessel last night at the height of a gale of nearly hurricane force with blinding snow. Just after midnight the ship's radio went silent.—Reuter.

Stockholm, Jan. 10.—About midday to-day loose wreckage and boards of various kinds were found along the shore near Gardskar Lighthouse. The steamer Nedjan left Norrsundet at 3 p.m., G.M.T., on Saturday (Jan. 9) for Ipswich with a cargo of timber.—Reuter.

Hernösand, Jan. 10.—Swedish steamer Nedjan total loss outside Eggegrund last night; crew lost.

Stockholm, Jan. 10.—The Swedish steamer Nedjan, with 16 crew on board, was presumed sunk in the Gulf of Bothnia to-day after reporting that she was drifting helplessly with a smashed rudder. Fishermen searching the rocky coastline for survivors recovered an unidentified body late this afternoon and parts of the steamer's deckhouse. They also found planks believed to have come from her deck cargo of 350 standards of timber.—Reuter.

NEDJAN.—Gefle, Jan. 11.—Swedish steamer Nedjan, SFQE, was wrecked with all crew on Jan. 9-10 in a gale in Gulf of Bothnia, probably east of Lofgrunds Rabbar. Wreckage, lifebuoys, &c., found north of Gardskar fishing harbour. (See issue of Jan. 11.)

Stockholm, Jan. 11.—All hope has been given up of saving the 16 men of the Swedish steamer Nedjan, which sank in rough seas off Gefle. Pieces of wreckage from the Nedjan were found on the coast south of Gefle last night. Only one body has been found.—British United Press.
