

STEFANOS COSTOMENIS.—New York, Feb. 18.—The crew of the Greek steamer Stefanos Costomenis, which is believed to be sinking in the Atlantic, are ready to abandon the vessel, according to wireless messages received in New York. The American steamer City of Newport News, which has gone to the rescue, reports that at 3.30 p.m. (8.30 p.m. G.M.T.) she found the Stefanos Costomenis with her decks awash. The crew had succeeded in launching one lifeboat.—British United Press.

—New York, Feb. 18.—United States Coastguard Service has been advised that the American steamer City of Newport News has picked up the entire crew of 30 of the Greek steamer Stefanos Costomenis, which has been abandoned in a sinking condition.—British United Press.

STEFANOS COSTOMENIS.—New York, Feb. 18.—Coastguard reports steamer City of Newport News received wireless at 2 20 p.m. from master of steamer Stefanos Costomenis stating assistance required immediately to save crew. Message relayed to cutter Champlain.

—New York, Feb. 18. — Master of Greek steamer Stefanos Costomenis, p.m., notified vessels proceeding to her assistance that the crew was preparing to abandon ship. American steamer City of Newport News wirelessly she expected to be in position to pick up any boats launched off steamer.

—New York, Feb. 18. — The crew of the Greek steamer Stefanos Costomenis, which is believed to be sinking in the Atlantic, are ready to abandon the vessel, according to wireless messages received in New York. The American steamer City of Newport News, which has gone to the rescue, reports that at 3 30 p.m. (8 30 p.m., G.M.T.) she found the Stefanos Costomenis with her decks awash. The crew had succeeded in launching one lifeboat.—British United Press.

Norfolk, Feb. 18.—Greek steamer Stefanos Costomenis: Crew reported taken off by American steamer City of Newport News. Time abandoned 3 30 p.m. (8 30 p.m., G.M.T.).

—New York, Feb. 18.—The United States Coastguard Service has been advised that the American steamer City of Newport News has picked up the entire crew of 30 of the Greek steamer Stefanos Costomenis, which has been abandoned in a sinking condition.—British United Press.

—New York, Feb. 19.—Steamer Stefanos Costomenis: Master of steamer City of Newport News wirelessly last evening: Greek crew safely aboard my ship. She is lying with colours flying and anchor light exhibited, have already broadcast derelict position; proceeding Norfolk.

© 2020

Lloyd's Register
Foundation

W529-0004