Laid up case.

Note: Forward boiler now examined.

IT IS SUBMITTED the Liverpool Surveyors be advised that in the case of laid up vessels where the boiler survey is more than twelve months overdue it is the intention of the Committee that the boiler or boilers which is to be used for harbour purposes should be examined.

In these cases the Surveyor should examine the boiler or boilers in question generally, but it will not be necessary to open up and examine the mountings unless deemed necessary by the Surveyor.

It will be observed that all the boilers need not be examined.

It should also be pointed out the Committee desire that half the usual survey fee be charged in these cases, and therefore an account for a fee of £1 should be rendered in this case.

It is concluded that in the case of this vessel the forward boiler only will be used for harbour purposes, but this should be confirmed.
