Vessel left Aberystwith on Nov. 27, 1925, for Antwerp, and has not arrived at her destination.

The owners state that they have no news of the steamer, beyond hatches and damaged lifeboat washed ashore in Cardigan Bay, also a seaman's body recognised as one of the crew; they have abandoned ^{hope} take no exception to her name being expunged.

The vessel has been posted as missing at Lloyd's

SOURCE OF INFORMATION

SUTTON.—Newquay (Cardigan), Dec. 1.—Wreckage of small boat and lifebuoy marked "Sutton," also two bodies, washed ashore at Penbryn, Cardiganshire.

London, Dec. 1.—The owners of the steamer Sutton telegraph that the vessel left Aberystwith for Antwerp at 6.30 on Friday evening (Nov. 27).

London, Dec. 1.—In reply to inquiry, Lloyd's Agent at Aberystwith telegraphs to-day: Steamer Sutton left this port with cargo lead ore for Antwerp. Only information I have is from newspaper report of finding of ship's boat near Aberporth, between Newquay and Cardigan.

London, Dec. 1.—From tattoos marks on the arms, the body of a man washed ashore at Aberporth beach has been identified by his brother, Harry Booth, of Runcorn. A message from the Runcorn police states that the female body washed ashore at Penbryn is probably that of the master's wife.

London, Dec. 1.—It is now definitely established that the bodies washed ashore during the week end on the coast of southern Cardiganshire are those of the crew of the steamer Sutton, a Liverpool coaster, which left Aberystwith under good conditions on Friday (Nov. 27) for Antwerp, loaded with lead and zinc concentrates, in charge of Captain Teretta, with a crew of ten men. The master was accompanied by his wife and their daughter.

MISSING VESSEL.

SUTTON.—London, Dec. 30.—Steamer Sutton, of Liverpool, 485 tons gross, official number 143,676, master Teretta, which left Aberystwith on Nov. 27, 1925, for Antwerp, with a cargo of lead and/or zinc residue, was to-day posted at Lloyd's as a missing vessel.
